The Greek island of Santorini is famous for this view of the sunset. Conditions for capturing it are difficult as it is necessary to avoid thousands of selfie sticks thrust into the air in front of conventional lenses.

Artist Profile: Hilary Roberts

I have been involved in photography for about thirty years. I am a Fellow of the Royal Photographic Society and share the distinction of Master of the International Federation of Photographic Art with less than two hundred people worldwide.

These days I see myself as an image maker rather than a photographer because there is often a lot of manipulation involved - or, as I call it, fiddling.

My main objective is that people looking at my images feel good - about themselves, about the world, about life. I sell my pictures to enable me to support a severely disabled little boy in Cuba and all proceeds are used to fund this project.

My work is very diverse and amongst other subjects I enjoy flowers, people, nature, architecture and landscape - and I particularly like to produce unusual and amusing images.

My pictures come from this country and all over the world - and from my home studio. I look for beauty, strangeness, striking colour, amazing texture or the perfect light.
